
From: Hedley Higgs
Sent: Wednesday, 15 August 2018 9:37 PM
To: Policy
Subject: Removal of Painting licence

Team

Please reconsider this trade as the other building trades and NOT remove the licence requirements.

The only thing that is stopping poor workmanship is that clients, insurers and companies are asking for a licenced tradesperson to undertake work, which forces the painters to undertake trades training, then get a licence, it sorts out the real tradies with proper work ethics.

All trades should have a cert 3 to have insurance, in lieu of licence, if you are going to abolish for painters, this would basically kill off any RTO such as TAFE that trains painters in all forms, so you will kill off another TAFE training area.

Poor decision on a 3 year trade course, remember you all paint your houses or units and you are going to invite untrained brush hands with no cert 3 training, it will butcher the trade

Shame
Sent from my iPhone